

ABSTRACT

Methods for forming a contact hole in a semiconductor device are disclosed. A disclosed method is capable of preventing voids from being formed in a contact hole or a via hole. In particular, when a metal insulation film or an interlayer insulation film is selectively etched to form a contact hole or a via hole, a top edge of the contact hole or the via hole is rounded by using a plasma having spiral movement.